Facial and Hand Rejuvenation

With nearly 20 years of experience in performing facelift and eyelid surgeries (blepharoplasty), Dr. Broumand has found that patients are concerned that their hands reveal a discrepancy in their age after having facelift and eyelid surgery. Patients may become aware that their hands may have lost fat which can result in a thin, transparent or bony appearance. Veins may have become more visible, and age spots may have developed. utilizing the wisdom of many techniques individualized for each patient, taking 7-10 years off their appearance. These new techniques which are available for the hands can significantly improve their appearance. Dr. Broumand is now utilizing new fillers, fat grafting, newer light lasers and chemical peels to improve the hand appearance (to coincide with the results achieved with facial rejuvenation).

For thin looking hands, Dr. Broumand injects fillers under local anesthesia. This procedure can be done quickly and easily—and at the same time as facial rejuvenation. A single treatment may provide instant results that can last up to one year. For those patients who experience only minimal bruising and swelling, moderate activities can be resumed immediately. Lasers and peels are utilized to rid the hands of age spots and gives the skin a more youthful appearance. These procedures are also done under local anesthesia and patients can see visible results with minimal discomfort and minimal down time. Complete treatment for face and hands are available. Consultations are the best way to determine which options work best. Dr. Stafford R. Broumand, a board certified plastic surgeon, is an exceptional cosmetic physician with an office in New York City. Committed to patient satisfaction and personalized attention, he offers beautiful, natural looking facelifts and hand rejuvenation.
